CHALLENGE

As the fastest growing company in the fastest growing segment of the networked storage space, EqualLogic was really making a name for itself in the industry. With its North American business doubling each year and its European operations already established, EqualLogic realized that it needed to quickly round out its global presence in preparation for the company's IPO by expanding into the strategically important and fast-growing Asia Pacific markets.

THE RTM ASIA SOLUTION

EqualLogic engaged RTM Asia in January of 2007 to assist in the planning and execution of an Asia market expansion covering the key markets of Japan, Greater China and Korea. During the initial phase of the market assessment, RTM Asia recommended that EqualLogic establish a subsidiary and build a direct presence in Japan in order to expand on its existing channel business. As part of RTM Asia's comprehensive service solution, RTM's executive team, working together with EqualLogic management, quickly recruited a high caliber team of seasoned sales and technical staff with extensive experience in the Japan storage market.

Unlike Japan, EqualLogic's business in the Greater China and Korean markets was less developed with only a handful of small resellers, and low run-rate revenue. To meet EqualLogic's need to quickly have a sales presence without a lot of administrative overhead, RTM Asia devised a flexible but effective China/Korea market entry mechanism for EqualLogic consisting of team of outsourced sales and technical staff dedicated to EqualLogic's business, providing EqualLogic with instant market coverage in six cities across Greater China and Korea.

With the resources in place to facilitate business operations, RTM Asia designed and rolled out the multi-faceted SAN.Generation program, aimed at capturing the technical mindshare of technical engineers and architects of Systems Integrators, resellers and end user customers with EqualLogic's market leading iSCSI based storage technologies. Targeting China as the pilot region for the SAN.Generation program, over 1,000 attendees from hundreds of companies were trained on EqualLogic's technology, creating a self-propagating network of technical proponents for EqualLogic technology in the China market. Through sales leads generated from the SAN.Generation program, EqualLogic was able to expand their install base into the fast growing HDTV (High Definition TV) market segment and signed up a key OEM customer in the Chinese government sector, opening up a significant new revenue streams for the company and more than doubling their year over year revenue in the region.

THE RESULTS

By leveraging RTM Asia's services, EqualLogic was able to meet their aggressive Asia market expansion goals, establishing a subsidiary in Japan and putting in place a seasoned sales and technical team within three months as well as gaining instant coverage in over 6 cities across Greater China and Korea. As a result, in the first year of RTM Asia's involvement, revenue in more than doubled over the previous year. This enhanced presence and success in Asia has made EqualLogic, Inc., naturally appear more valuable to investors. On November 5, 2007, Dell Corporation announced that they had signed an agreement to acquire EqualLogic for $1.4 billion in cash. Post acquisition, Dell Corporation retained RTM Asia services to ramp up their team and close the sales pipeline for the better part of one year.

CEO QUOTE

Don Bulens
CEO, EqualLogic, Inc

Asia was a key part of our market expansion strategy in 2007 and we needed to move fast. The RTM Asia team provided us with a well thought out plan of what was needed in each country and then supported a seamless execution. The entire experience of opening up our Japan subsidiary, building out an Asia team, marketing our products and training more than a thousand people in our technology was all done as an extension to our own organization. There is no doubt that working with RTM Asia has saved us time and money but more importantly, helped us to achieve our aggressive market expansion goals in the time required.
